AI NOTES SERIES - PROMPT SHORTCUTS

Report Remarks Helper

Copy-and-paste AI prompts that turn your short notes about a child into fair, personal report card remarks - for the topper, the average child and the child who is struggling. For ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, Muse and other AI tools.

This is one shortcut from a series of separate notes - one topic per PDF. It is written for primary school teachers at report time. Copy a prompt, replace the words inside [square brackets] with your own true notes about the child, and paste it into any AI tool. The AI only shapes your words - you decide what is true about each child, and you check every remark before it goes on a report.

A Good Remark Says Three Things

Parents read one remark and ask three questions: How is my child doing? What is the proof? What should we do next? A remark that answers all three is trusted. A remark that only says "Good" or "Work hard" answers none of them.

Part	What to write	Example
1. Strength	One real strength you have seen this term.	Reads Urdu stories aloud with confidence.
2. Evidence	One small, true example - a test, a habit, a moment.	Scored full marks in the October reading test.
3. Next step	One clear thing to improve, said kindly.	Now needs to practise writing new words in sentences.

Match the remark to the level

Level	Tone and focus
Excellent	Celebrate, name the achievement, then set a harder challenge - a topper also needs a next step.
Good	Warm and specific; point to the one subject or skill that can rise next.
Satisfactory	Honest and steady; praise effort, name one weak area and one simple action for home.
Needs support	Never a label. Describe the difficulty, the help already given, and the plan - and invite the parents to meet you.

> Words that must never go on a report: lazy, dull, careless child, hopeless, weak-minded. Describe the work and the behaviour, never the child: write "homework is often incomplete" - not "he is careless". A remark stays in a child's file for years.

The Master Prompt

One prompt for one child. Fill every bracket from your own notes or register, send, and check the result against what you know before you copy it onto the report.

1. One personal remark for one child - the master prompt

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, Muse

> You are helping a primary school teacher write a report card remark. Write a remark of 2 to 3 short sentences in simple, kind English for [child's first name], a Class [4] student. Level this term: [excellent / good / satisfactory / needs support]. One real strength: [e.g. neat handwriting and regular homework]. One true example: [e.g. got 18 out of 20 in the last Maths test]. One thing to improve: [e.g. reading English aloud - still slow with new words]. Follow this order: strength first, then the example, then the next step said kindly. Do not invent any marks, behaviour or facts I did not give you. Do not use labels like lazy or dull. If I write 'no next step', end after the example.

Tip: Keep a small notebook page per class during the term - one line per child after tests and activities. Report week then becomes filling brackets, not trying to remember 40 children at once.

Why this prompt works

- It uses your facts only. Strength, example and next step all come from you, so the remark is personal - the AI only joins them into smooth English.
- It fixes the order. Strength, evidence, next step is the order parents trust, and it stops the remark opening with a weakness.
- It bans invention and labels. The last two lines stop the AI adding marks you never gave or words that can hurt a child.
- It fits the box. Two to three short sentences fit the remarks space on most report cards and result sheets.

> Short of time? Give the AI three children in one message, each with their own strength, example and next step, and ask for the remarks numbered separately. Never paste two children's facts in one bracket - that is how remarks get mixed up.

Ready Prompts for the Whole Class

The three jobs that take the longest at report time: a full class list, remarks for one subject, and a kind remark for a child who is finding school hard.

2. Whole class in one go - the batch prompt

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> I will give you a list of students. For each one, write a report remark of 2 short sentences: one strength or fact from my note, then one kind next step. Keep every remark different - do not repeat the same sentences. Here is my list: 1) [Name] - [level] - [your short note]. 2) [Name] - [level] - [your short note]. [Continue for the whole class.] Number the remarks to match my list, and do not add any fact that is not in my notes.

Tip: Send 8 to 10 children per message, not 40. Short lists keep names and facts matched correctly, and are much quicker to check.

3. Subject remark - Maths, English, Urdu, Science

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> Write a one-subject report remark of 2 sentences for [child's first name], Class [5], for [Maths]. This term in this subject: strong in [e.g. addition and tables], weak in [e.g. word problems], marks [e.g. 34 out of 50]. Sentence 1: what the child can now do in this subject. Sentence 2: the one skill to practise next term, with a simple way parents can help at home in 10 minutes a day.

Tip: Subject remarks work best subject by subject for the whole class - do Maths for everyone while the Maths marks are open in front of you.

4. A struggling child - encouraging and honest

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> Write a kind, honest report remark of 3 sentences for [child's first name], Class [3], who is finding school difficult this term. Difficulties: [e.g. reading is below class level, often absent in October]. Effort or improvement I have seen: [e.g. now sits and finishes copy work, tries to read aloud]. Help already given: [e.g. extra reading time with me daily]. Write sentence 1 about effort or improvement, sentence 2 honestly about the difficulty without any label, and sentence 3 as our plan plus an invitation for the parents to meet me. Keep the tone hopeful.

Tip: Read this remark twice before using it. For a struggling child the remark is also a message to the parents - it should bring them to school to help, not make them angry or ashamed.

Ready Prompts for Special Cases

Four situations the master prompt does not fit: the topper, behaviour and attendance, the tiny one-line remarks box, and parents who need the remark in Urdu.

5. The topper - praise with a real challenge

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> Write a report remark of 2 to 3 sentences for [child's first name], Class [5], who stood [1st] in class with [92%] marks. Strongest points: [e.g. quick in Maths, helps classmates, beautiful Urdu writing]. Give full, specific praise - no general words only - then set one harder next challenge suitable for this level, such as [e.g. reading one English story book this term / learning tables up to 20 / writing a short paragraph daily]. End with one line encouraging the parents to keep the same routine at home.

Tip: One specific achievement in it - a position, a score, a habit - is worth more than a line of adjectives.

6. Behaviour and attendance remark

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> Write a short remark of 2 sentences about behaviour and attendance for [child's first name], Class [4]. Behaviour this term: [e.g. polite and helpful / sometimes disturbs the class during writing work]. Attendance: [e.g. present 58 of 62 days / often late in the morning]. Be factual and calm: describe only the behaviour I stated, never the child's character. If there is a problem, end with the improvement I want to see next term, said as a hope, not a warning.

Tip: Only write behaviour you have actually seen and noted. If your school keeps a separate conduct column, keep this remark for that column and the master prompt for studies.

7. One-line remarks for a small space

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> Give me 5 different one-line report remarks, each under 12 words, for a Class [2] child at [good] level whose strength is [e.g. careful colouring and neat work]. Each line must be complete, kind and different from the others - no label words. I will choose the one that fits best.

Tip: Ask for 5 options and choose - choosing is faster than editing. Save the lines you did not use; they may fit another child, after you check they are true for that child too.

8. The same remark in easy English and Urdu

Best for: ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini

> Here is a report remark in English: [paste your final remark]. 1) Rewrite it in very easy English that any parent can understand - short words, short sentences, same meaning, nothing added. 2) Then translate that easy version into simple Urdu written in Urdu script. Keep the child's name and all marks and numbers exactly the same in both versions.

Tip: Many parents understand a report far better in Urdu. Print or write the Urdu line under the English remark where your school allows it - it brings parents closer to the school.

Remarks Bank - Copy Without AI

No internet, no time? Copy a line from here and add the child's name and one true detail. Change at least one word or detail for each child - two brothers or friends must never take home the identical remark.

Level	Ready remarks
Excellent	An outstanding student who works with interest and helps classmates happily. Keep it up. Excellent progress in all subjects. Reading and writing have improved greatly this term. Shows full attention in class and completes every task on time. Very well done. A confident learner with neat work and regular homework. A pleasure to teach.
Good	Good progress this term. With a little more practice in [subject], results can become excellent. Works carefully and listens well in class. Needs to read aloud at home daily. A regular and well-behaved student. Handwriting and class work are both improving. Shows good understanding in class. Should attempt written work with more confidence.
Satisfactory	Progress is satisfactory. Daily reading and homework practice at home will bring better results. Can do much better with regular study. Parents are requested to check homework daily. Understands lessons in class but written practice is weak. Needs daily writing practice. Effort is improving slowly. Regular attendance and completed homework are the next steps.
Needs support	Is trying hard and has improved in [skill]. Extra reading practice at home will help a lot. Needs support in basic reading and writing. We are giving extra time in class; parents are requested to meet the teacher. Attendance remained low this term, which affected progress. Regular attendance will bring clear improvement. A quiet, well-behaved child who needs confidence. Small daily practice at home is requested.

> Make any bank line personal in ten seconds: add one true detail - a score, a subject, a habit. "Good progress this term" becomes "Good progress this term - especially in Maths, where he scored 18 out of 20." That one detail is what a parent remembers.

Worked Example - From Notes to Remark

A Class 4 teacher has three short notes in her register. Watch how little the teacher writes - and how much the method does.

Teacher's notes: Ayesha, Class 4. Good level. Strong: Urdu reading, very fluent. Example: first in the class reading competition. Improve: English writing - spells common words wrongly.

Prompt used: the master prompt (card 1) with those notes filled into the brackets.

Remark received: "Ayesha reads Urdu fluently and with confidence, and she stood first in the class reading competition this term. Her next step is English writing, where she needs to practise the spelling of common words in short sentences every day."

Teacher's check: name correct, level correct, the competition result is real, the spelling point is the one she noted. One word changed by hand - "every day" became "daily" to fit the box. The remark goes on the report.

Before any remark goes on a report

1. Check the name and class. A right remark on the wrong child's report is the worst report-time mistake.
2. Check every fact. Marks, positions, attendance - if you did not give it or cannot confirm it, delete it.
3. Read it as a parent. Would this tell you how your child is doing and what to do at home? If not, add the next step.
4. Read the class set together. No two children should carry the same remark word for word.

Honest use - the teacher decides, the AI only drafts. Never paste students' full names, roll numbers or family details into a public AI tool - a first name and class are enough for a remark. Never use a remark about effort, behaviour or attendance that you have not personally seen and noted. And never let the AI decide a child's level: the level in the bracket is your professional judgement, from your marks and your register.

The fastest report week is built during the term: one line per child after each test, competition and parents' meeting. With those lines ready, these prompts finish a full class of honest, personal remarks in one sitting - every child seen, every parent answered.
